3. Reading Text

In 2050, our lives may be very different. Some objects that people use today may stay in the past. Many people will not use CDs because music will be on phones and apps. Paper maps may disappear because people will use digital maps. Cash may be less common because people will pay with cards, phones, or codes. House keys may also change. Some people will open doors with numbers or apps. Schools may change too. Students will use more digital tools, but they will still need good ideas, questions, and respect. The main idea is simple: technology will replace some objects, but people will still need to think, learn, and communicate.
